WEEKLY REPUBLICAN-1867.

MAYSVILLE, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1919.

ONE COPY-ONE CENT.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE CONTINUED UNTIL JULY 10th

Mason County Is Yet Far Behind In Her Apportionment and Must Come Up Within the Week Left in Campaign.

Mr. Alfred Peed who is chairman of the Salvation Army drive in Mason county, today received a communication from state headquarters in Lexington informing him that the campaign had been continued for another week or until July 10 because in many sections of the state the workers had been unable to visit all of the people in their neighborhoods as wheat harvest has been on in full blast.

This is true in Mason county. Wheat harvest has been on in full blast throughout the county all this week and the latter part of last week and for this reason the precinct workers here have been greatly hampered, however during the week the county's subscription has been materially increased. Mr. Peed has not received reports from all of his precinct workers but he says that the county is still far short of their quota.

During the week that is now left Mr. Peed is urging all of his workers to do their best toward reaching the quota. Folks who have not yet contributed to the Salvation Army fund ter harvest season and the wheat is them by telephone and making their are not many threshing machines in subscription.

17 CHARTER MEMBERS IN LOCAL CLERK'S UNION

Charter For Maysville Clerks' Union Is Applied For and Many Members are Promised in Short Time.

At a meeting held Wednesday evening persons who have been anxious to see a clerk's union organized in Maysville completed all preliminary arrangements and Mr. R. N. Stickley was elected Corresponding and Financial Secretary and instructed to make application to the International Union for a charter for the local organization. There are up to the present time seventeen charter members in the organization and it is understood that many more have signified their intention of becoming members just as soon as the charter is granted and the organization has been perfected.

The local merchants are not opposed to the organization and most every retail store in the city will be represented.

There are few men in the county who has a more general acquaintance with Mason county people. He has long been one of Farewell to mother and friends they the city's most popular physicians and in a professional way he has visited a great number of homes.

Dr. Yazell has made a wonderful success, climbing from a small practise as a young man, first coming to Maysville, to one of the largest practises of any physician in this entire section.

His general ability, his experience in matters of importance and his own personal success make him a splendid candidate who will be supported by the people of Mason County and elected to represent cur county at Frankfort in November.

"THE STARS AND STRIPES" PASSES

Few there can be in the United States who have not heard of the A. E. F. newspaper, The Stars and Stripes; but many there must be who do not know that the managing editor remained content to Clasping the shot and shell pierce be a private in the United States army and resolutely refused a commission, says the Christian Science Monitor.

Formerly a newspaper reporter, Private Harold W. Ross had opportunity to be sent to an officers' training school in France, but preferred to join the staff of the A. E. F. newspaper, then in its very beginning. He became, before long, managing editor, and so important was the part that the paper played in the life of the American forces in France that he was asked if his work could not be done to better advantage if he became a commissioned officer: to which he answered that even a corporal's chevrons would embarrass him. It has been said that no man had greater influence upon the thought of the A. E. F. than he, for The Stars and Stripes grew, within a year, to a circulation of about half a million, and became one of the most widely read journals in the world.

PROTECTING HOMES

Chicago is asking the Illinois legislature for a zoning law-a law that will permit eities in Illinois to say what part shall be reserved for residence purposes. This is a thing that every city in the country has some interest in because it is a step in the right direction. There must be factory and commercial districts, of course, and there must also be residence districts. But is isn't fair to a man who has developed a residence property, beautified the grounds, and arranged the house to suit him to have, all of a sudden, some sort of business concern established next door to the detriment of his home. Every city in the country has numerous examples of just that sore of thing. Restricting residence property is going to become more and more the thing as the years go by. We have a few districts in Davenport that are thus protected, but there are many other districts where the people who own homes have no protection at all from the possibility of undesirable construction and business enterprises on the lots next door .- Davenport Times.

You can guess that Dolly did not wait to be asked twice.

What she saw surprised her very much. It was a kind of house, but such a tumble-down looking house. Loose and broken stones were piled about, and on top of them were some rough boards. It looked as though it might be some kind of a stable. But no really nice horse would have loked to live in it. Dolly couldn't think what it could be for, but soon she saw some smoke coming out of a hole in the boards. She wondered if people could be in such a rough place.

She had not noticed something like a rude door in the side, until it opened A little girl come out. She looked very pale and thin. Her clothes were very poor. She walked out in front of the cabin and looked down what might have been a street once. Dolly saw that, all along the way, were other cabins as rough and poor looking as this. Then she began to see that these piles of stones had once been houses. They had all been thrown

"Why, what happened to kneck down all their houses?" said Dolly. "They were knocked down by big guns," said the Fairy. "This was a pretty village once and all the people had plenty to eat and wear. Then some wicked men came and fired their guns at the houses and those piles of stone are all that is left. They even cut down all the trees so that the people here could not have any fruit if they should ever come home.'

Dolly saw many broken tree-stumps It had once been a fine orchard full of apples and quinces. Now every tree had been killed. Some of them were still lying where they had fallen. pound to restore them to health and

"For more than four years," said the Fairy, "the men of this village had to go away and fight. Now that they can come home, their trees are dead, their fields torn up by bombs and shots, and their houses town down. But lookthat man coming down the read." The man was walking along. He was leading a little donkey hitched to a cart. The little girl ran to meet the man and he lifted her up and kissed

MANY BIG SCENES IN FOURTH OF JULY FEATURE PICTURE

Much Discussed "Unpardonable Sin" Is Big Attraction at Washington on Fourth of July.

There are "big scenes" without number in "The Unpardonable Sin", which is to be shown at the Washington Theater on the Fourth of July, and suspense though, paradoxically, "smallest" in point of characters involved, is the disrobing scene, which In the development of the story, his return to civil life.

Blanche Sweet, appearing as Dimmy Parcot, an aggressive American girl, in company with Matt Moore as Noll Winsor, an American working with Market streets decorated from roof to the Food Commission in Belgium, finds herself entering the military lines and forced to submit to the most careful search of her person for possible hidden documents. Methods used in making these military searches have received sufficient publicity to make the average man familiar with them, and it is pretty generally known that but little respect was paid to the feelings of modesty, which were natural on the part of women who fell into the toils of those ordered to make the searches. In "The Unpardonable Sin," Miss Sweet is shown alone in a room with one of the most repulsive characters that has ever been represented on the screen. Article by article, down to the last filmy garment, her clothes are removed, despite her protests and despite her desperate struggle.s The scene has been photographed through a diaphragm of silk, and the two characters appear in silhouette. It is remarkable, too, that so realistically has the situation been worked out that there is not even the slightest suggestion that this truly sensational bit has been "dragged in by the heels" to pander to tastes which are low or depraved.

Another exciting incident of the picture, entirely different in its nature, shows the escape of the principals from the clutches of those who would detain them. A regulation automobile supply truck, driven at break-neck speed, crashes through rough and unbroken fields, across little streams, and through gulleys and ditches, only a short distance in advance of a powerful military touring car, which finally gives up the ghost when it finds the going too hard. What the little machine accomplishes is wonderful, and the situation is one that makes for progressive and spontaneous cheering on the part of any audience before which the picture is shown

THE UNITED STATES INFANTRY IS EXPLAINED

The Body of the Army-The Branch to Which All Others Are Auxiliary and Subsidiary.

The infantryman is the typical soldier. When anyone speaks in your hearing of a soldier your mind instantly pictures an infantryman, a "doughboy," for remember it is to the infantryman alone that the term "doughboy" really belongs and it is due to his being so truly the representative and type of what goes to make a soldier that it has become customary to apply to all members of our expeditionary forces the name that in the old regular army pertained only to the infantryman.

It is the infantryman who mans the trenches, it is he who goes over the top, it is he who comes into hand to hand conflict with the enemy.

The aviator observes for him, the cavalry patrols for him, the artillery clears his path; all prepare the way for the infantryman to take the first decisive action, to make the assault.

The life of the infantryman appeals alike to the soldier who wished to reenlist and to the young man who looks towards the army either as a career or as a stepping stone to something else. To the seasoned soldier it means the life to which is accustomed with in the dark until the commission commore leisure than can be afforded him in the other branches, to the man who desires to enter the service permanently it offers as can no other branch an opportunity to absorb soldierly instincts and the military habits of menbut the "biggest" in point of interest tal and physical accuracy and self control while allowing more time than do the other branches for study and the preparation towards obtaining an has been attracting the attention of appointment to West Point, a commisthe public wherever the tremendous sion direct from the ranks or in exphotoplay feature has been exhibited. ercising some choice of occupation on

TEXT BOOK BODY KEEPING SILENT ON ADOPTIONS

Governor Black and Superintendent Gilbert Keep Mum on Action of Text Book Commission.

Frankfort, Ky., July 3 .- Just what the State Text Book Commission is doing and how far it has gone into the adoption of text books for the common schools of the State is guesswork, as the lips of the commissioners are sealed. The meetings are still in executive session and the members of the commission decline to give out any information. It is believed, however, that the work of adopting the text books will be completed by tomorrow evening.

At the session held Tuesday the commission adopted a ruling providing that no minutes of the meeting were to be given out until approved and signed. Superintendent of Public Instruction Gilbert was asked today if the commission approved the minutes of Tuesday's meeting and he replied in the negative. The action of the commission in failing to approve the minutes of the meetings is taken by those interested in the adoption of the books to mean that the public is to remain pletes its labors.

At the close of the session today Governor Black was asked what the commission did, and what progress had been made. He replied, "See Su perintendent Gilbert." Superintendent Gilbert was just as speechless as the chief executive, giving as his reason the fact that he was controlled by the will of the commission and that he could not make public their acts until the members so desired.

Superintendent Gilbert was then asked if the commission had completed the readoption of books now in use and he replied that it had not. He assured the press representatives, however, that in time the minutes would be made public and that as soon as he was given authority he would make public the bids of the publishing concerns.

PARIS MAYOR SHUTS

OUT CARNIVAL

Paris, Ky., July 3.-When Mayor E B. January vetoed the action of four members of the city council in granting a permit to license a carnival company to exhibit here for the week be binning Monday, July 7, he did an act for which he has received much comnendation from the farmers.

Last week a carnival company ex hibited here for the week and farmers had great trouble in getting help, as did many households in Paris and many complaints reached the ear of he mayor. Just now the wheat harvest is being rounded up, tobacco and corn need cultivation to kill out the weed pest and next week the work would be in full swing, whether or not the farmers could get help to thresh the wheat. Mayor January removed vance man for the show took the first interurban out.

There has been two enthusiastic meetings held in this city in the last two weeks, in interest of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The newly organized Maysville branch includes the county. And Sunday, July 6, at 4 p. m. at the Bethel Baptist Church there will be another meeting held, at which the country people are particularly requested to be present. Men and women of Mayslick, Washington, Lewisburg, Helena Station and Germantown who are standing for good in their respective communities and their race are asked not to fail to be present Sunday afternoon to find out the naure of this movement and their places in it. This meeting will not interfere whatever with the meeting held by Rev. I. Garland Penn, Jr., at Beechwood Park.
